New York City Mayor Michael Bloomberg and his wife defended same-sex marriage to reporters Monday when asked about his stance on same-sex marriage. "I have nothing to say to you," Bloomberg said to reporters in New York City. Bloomberg and his wife defended gay marriage for the third time in four days. Bloomberg has been criticized for his comments. And Bloomberg and his wife commented on the politicians that were "suing" the city. "The first group, the National Organization for Marriage, — this group we are suing has a whole website of lies," he said. "You know, just look them up. Go to their website. They lie," he said. "But the other groups we sued are very much in the pro-equality camp," he said. The former mayor said that LGBT activists in New York City and the country should be thanking him.
